STUDENT CLINIC

Holistic Nutrition Applications for Common Ailments:

The Student Clinic at The Institute of Holistic Nutrition (IHN) is designed to give graduating students earning their Certified Nutritional Practitioner (CNP) designation, a simulated professional environment where the principles and skills learned at IHN can be put into practice.

The Student Clinic is fully supervised by a Clinic Co-ordinator who is an alum of IHN and when not managing the clinic process, are required to run a successful private consulting practice.

If you are looking for answers to health challenges and are interested in pursuing optimal well-being through the natural health paradigm, we welcome you to consider our Student Clinic program. Our holistic nutritionists are guided to develop specific and practical nutritional, orthomolecular (natural health products) and lifestyle protocols to help you move through the imbalance you are facing and see desirable results. With the primary focus being a custom therapeutic diet and dietary supplements plan, our CNPs also consider herbal medicine and homeopathic remedies.

Each protocol is evaluated and checked for accuracy to ensure all recommendations are adeptly completed.

The clinic experience gives the public the opportunity to receive nutritional and lifestyle consultations for a fee at a third of the rate our graduates charge once they move into professional practice. Our graduating students are educated partners qualified to devise a personalized health scheme that integrates and honors the physical, emotional, environmental and spiritual aspects of an individual's life.

We welcome you to call and learn more about our program at the campus closest to you. We sincerely hope you enjoy your IHN Student Clinic experience!
